Why Self-Control?

Are you a self-controlled person? The lack of self-control can lead to outbursts of anger and overindulgence which may result in serious consequences—unwanted pregnancy, bankruptcy, obesity, and incarceration. For most of us, the consequences of being undisciplined have taught us to be self-disciplined.

As followers of Christ, we should be striving to increase our spiritual virtues. I find that I need a strong motive to overpower sinful desires. Here are a few Scriptures which tell us why self-control is needed

Self-control enables us to say “no” to sins. When the apostle discussed “righteousness, self-control and the judgment to come,” the Roman governor became frightened (Acts 24:24-25). Knowing that one will be held accountable for his or her choices can motivate one to change and obeying the gospel. Many people have answered the call of Jesus because of a “fire and brimstone” sermon. Self-control helps to keep you out of the eternal fires of hell.

While fear is a powerful motivator, it tends to diminish over time. Eventually, we will need something stronger. Something like love. Jesus Himself says, “If you love Me, you will keep my commandments” (John 14:15). Love is the strongest motivation. People will die for love. People will sacrifice for love. People will do just about anything for love. If you love God with all of your heart, you will strive to be self-controlled.

Reward is also a powerful motivation. People compete and exercise self-control to win trophies and recognition. Often those rewards end up in the pawn shop or the trash. But, we are competing to win a crown of righteousness that will never fade or be forgotten (1 Corinthians 9:25; 2 Timothy 4:8). Your eternal reward is a strong motive to live a self-disciplined life.

If you're not self-disciplined, you might need a stronger motivation, a more compelling “why.” Fear of hell, love for God, and a desire for an eternal reward could be what you need.
