Volume 23, Issue 46

November 15, 2020

That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we looked upon and have touched with our hands, concerning the word of life—the life was made manifest, and we have seen it, and testify to it and proclaim to you the eternal life, which was with the Father and was made manifest to us—that which we have seen and heard we proclaim also to you, so that you too may have fellowship with us; and indeed our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ (1 John 1:1–3 ESV).

Context

Words derive meaning from context. I love chocolate, and I love my wife. My desire for chocolate is not as great as my feelings for my wife. Loving chocolate does not mean that I only eat chocolate whereas loving my wife means that we are in an exclusive relationship. Therefore, the word love can mean different things in different settings.

Several biblical words change meaning according to context. One example is the word faith. Depending on the context, it can mean at least five different things. Faith may denote the system of beliefs which God has revealed for all Christians to follow (Jude 1:3). It may signify the miraculous power which God gave to some Christians (1 Corinthians 13:2). It may mean saving faith (Ephesians 2:8). There is also a dead faith (James 2:17). Finally, faith may imply personal convictions (Romans 14:2).

If we are going to understand and apply Scriptures correctly, we must consider the context of the words. If we fail to recognize the context of a word, we may misinterpret God's meaning and misapply His instructions.

Failure to consider context may leave us short of God's will or well beyond it. Context is to biblical interpretation what location is to buying property. Context is to biblical interpretation what gas is to a car. Context is to biblical interpretation what love is to being a Christian (1 John 4:8).

Riverglo

We are sad to announce that there is no Riverglo this year which means there is no Live Nativity because of COVID restrictions.
